Sustainability Forum 2021

Navigating the Uncertainty with ESG

Overview

Even prior to the global spread of COVID-19, sustainability and climate action were at the top of the agenda for executives around the world. Now, we have all experienced just how closely interrelated the health of our economy, our people, and the environment are. Once the world overcomes the worst of the pandemic, a key part of rebuilding our economy will be embracing the ESG agenda. This game-changer gives companies a chance to develop net-zero and circularity roadmaps for to protect shareholder value, and to create opportunities for growth and innovation.

Managing ESG issues means both mitigating risks and capturing opportunities, so the key questions companies need to be asking themselves include:

- Will an ESG/SDG strategy really help us survive and find new opportunities in the coming decades?
- How can we incorporate ESG concepts into our company as the COVID-19 pandemic changes our context?
- How will we find the optimal ESG strategy to fit best with our company mission and vision, and all our stakeholders?
